Twin whammy hits 4.7M Meralco customers

By Aligall L. Ho

A DOUBLE WHAMMY IS HITTING CUSTOMERS of Manila Electric Co. (Meralco)—brownouts and higher power rates.

Customers of Meralco, the country's biggest power distributor, will have to bear an additional burden of P1.28 per kilowatt-hour (kWh) starting this month, due largely to the huge spike in the cost of power it buys from suppliers.

This means that consumers using 100 kWh a month will see their bill rise by P128, while those using 300 kWh a month will have to shell out an additional P384.

A household in Marikina City that used 114 kWh last month was billed by Meralco P1,155.25.

Meralco had a total of 4.715 million customers in 2009, including 4,277 million residential customers, 424,000 commercial customers and 30,000 industrial customers.

Its franchise area covers 29 cities and 82 municipalities, including Metro Manila, the city proper.

The power rates come at a time when Metro Manila and other parts of Luzon are suffering from rotating brownouts due to a power supply

RODOLFO BROWNOUTS TOOK a turn for the worse yesterday in Metro Manila and other parts of Luzon suffered longer outages because a number of power plants were still down, either as maintenance or because of electrical outages.

The outages lasted two to three hours, up from just two hours the previous day, in different parts of the franchise area of Manila Electric Co. (Meralco), the country's biggest power distributor.

Its franchise area has a population of 34 million and covers 29 cities and 82 municipalities, including Metro Manila, the entire provinces of Bulacan, Rizal and Cavite; parts of the provinces of Laguna, Quezon and Batangas; and 17 municipalities in Pangasinan.

Meralco said scheduled brownouts were scheduled between 8 a.m. and 10 p.m. yesterday.

Smoker in jet triggers US bomb scare

DROVER—A MERCHANT DEPLORED who grabbed a cigarette inside a jetliner's toilet sparked a bomb scare and widespread alarm that sent jet fighters scrambling to intercept the Denver-bound flight, officials said.

But an explosives were found and authorities speaking on condition of anonymity said they did not think he was trying to harm anyone and he would not be criminally charged.

An Arab driver boarded the aircraft identified the diplomat as Mohammed al-Madadi of Qatar, an oil-rich Middle East nation and close US ally.

MANILA CITY, NUEVA ECija—Survey from runner Sen. Benigno "Noy" Aquino III yesterday called on his backing allies to sacrifice personal ambition in order to realize their common goal of bringing about change through the May elections.

The Liberal Party standard-bearer appeared rattled by reports that the LP was in turmoil as a result of a power play between his running mate Sen. Manuel "Mar" Roxas II and his kinsman Sen. Francisco "Chiz" Romulo for control of his campaign strategy and logistics.

"There might be a battle between Mar and Chiz down the line, but [even if] there is [such] a battle, will you sacrifice for the nation we all love at this point in time?" Aquino said at a press conference.

Roxas and Romulo are seen as potential rivals for the presidency in 2010.

The explosion was among passengers on a flight from Washington, DC, where a Qatar diplomat trying to make a transfer to an airplane had been spotted a short time ago.

Smoker inside airplane triggers US bomb scare

Three months after the attempted rescue at sea on Christmas Day when a Nigerian man died in a fight up a Detroit-bound airplane. Since then, law enforcement, flight attendants and passengers have been on high alert for suspicious activity on airplanes. The man's reported injury led to the country's national security and prompted immediate changes in airline screening policies.

Two law-enforcement officials and investigators were told the Qatar man was asked about the smell of smoke in the bathroom and he made a joke that he had been bringing his dog—on apparent reference to the 2001 so-called "door bomber" Richard Reid.

Officials said an aircraft smelled the airplane in the floor and he was questioned. The plane landed safely as military jets were scrambled.

'Heavie misunderstanding'

President Barack Obama was briefed about the incident aboard Air Force One by National Security Advisor Gen. Jim Jones and National Security Chief of Staff Dennis McInerney, said a White House official. The President was working in Prague, where he'll sign a nuclear arms treaty with Russia on Thursday.

A US security official acknowledged it may have been a "heavie misunderstanding," adding ABC news that it showed the man was making a "sarcastic" comment which was then confirmed by two air marshals.

The flight 767 was carrying 137 passengers and six crew members, and United Airlines spokeswoman Michael Travis. Qatar's Ambassador to Washington, Ali bin Fahad Al-Najai said in a statement that the diplomat was traveling to Denver on a four-day business trip.

"It was certainly not intended in any threatening way," the ambassador said. "The facts will reveal that this was a mistake, and we urge all concerned parties to avoid making judgemental conclusions." Passengers said they were kept on the plane for nearly an hour after it landed and then were questioned by officials.

Two jets alongside

Passenger Tim Farnley, 26, of Missouri, said the Boeing 767 was parked alongside another plane about an hour into the flight. He said the plane had been on the tarmac and was two jet-lifts alongside the plane.

"I'm in the sky a lot, and I was thinking that might not be so normal," he said. "There was a large aircraft being towed at the airport to be questioned over something so minor."

"I was pretty sure there was no concern," he said.

Dave Karamian, 35, of Colorado, said he and his wife, Laura, were sitting behind the man in the first-class section of the plane. He said the man got up to go to the bathroom and that someone later told him something on the flight crew. After that, two marshals in full gear approached the man and sat next to him for the remainder of the flight.

Karamian said his wife told him it all happened very quickly and that "there was no arguing, no shouting, nothing." He said the marshals seemed concerned about the man before the incident.

Law-raising diplomat

Another passenger, 41-year-old Scott Smith of Wyoming, said he was seated next to the man in the plane and didn't notice any disturbance during the flight.

However, he said the approach into the runway was "interesting."

"The plane is a little bit, and we were by the way for a long period of time," Smith, a computer programmer, told reporters by cell phone. "I've never seen a jetliner do that. There were no announcements, nothing about any emergency or anything like that." A senior state department official said the agency was aware of the sensitive identification of the man as a Qatar diplomat and that they would be "comprehensive, diplomatic and sensitive" if it had confirmed a crime.

The latest edition of the Department of State's a registry of foreign diplomats working in the United States, shows that a man named Mohamed Hamed Y.M. Al-Masoudi is an official secretary for the Qatar's Embassy in Washington. That secretary has a relatively low ranking position at any diplomatic post.

Foreign diplomats in the United States have temporary diplomatic status and are not subject to US immigration laws.

Charged or expelled?

The official said if the man's identity as a Qatar diplomat was confirmed, it was possible that he may have committed a crime. US authorities would have to decide whether to charge Qatar to make his diplomat immunity so he could be charged and tried. Qatar could decide, the official said, whether the man would likely be expelled from the United States.

An online biography on the business networking site LinkedIn shows that a Mohamed bin Abdulaziz has been in Washington since at least 2007, when he began working at George Washington University's business school.

The job title listed on the site is director of administration at Qatar's Embassy in Washington.

Qatar, about the size of Connecticut and Rhode Island combined with a population of about 2.4 million people, is situated on the Arabian peninsula and surrounded by other states by the Persian Gulf and to the north by Saudi Arabia.

The country hosts the United Nations of the US Central Command, which runs the war on terror in Afghanistan and Iraq, and a major supplier of operations (armed forces) in Iraq. It also played a prime role in the 1991 Gulf War, which drove Saddam Hussein's troops from Kuwait. AP Wire/AP and AP

THE MEDICAL CITY
Where Patients are Partners

Helping You Fulfill Your Child's Full Potential

Wellness is not measured by physical aspects alone. A child continuously evolves in countless other ways, and this is manifested in the way he/she behaves, reacts to stimuli and deals with different situations.

Thus, how the child learns new skills and functions in given social environments should be understood. Parents should be concerned about their child's developmental evolution as this is indicative of potential within the child that may remain untapped and need to be properly cultivated.

Since its inception, the Center for Developmental Pediatrics has firmly believed that every child can realize his/her full potential regardless of developmental challenges. Its comprehensive approach to pediatric healthcare assures a child's overall wellness and the parents' peace of mind.

The Center treats all parents as partners, and values their observations, opinions and suggestions. It features programs that help parents deal with their child effectively, and understand their role in the child's development.

The Medical City's Center for Developmental Pediatrics: A Comprehensive Approach to Overall Child Wellness

The Center is open Tuesday to Saturday, from 9 AM to 5 PM. For more information, log on to www.themedicalcity.com, contact us at (972) 655-6765 fax, (972) 655-6765 or email us at info@themedicalcity.com.

Early Detection is Key: Developmental Screening and Surveillance

Using standardized tools and direct observation, Developmental Screening and Surveillance services identify whether a child may be at risk for developmental and behavioral problems that would require more intensive evaluation by a specialized developmental pediatrician.

The Center also offers the following complementary services:

Comprehensive Evaluation and Diagnosis. Complete assessment/diagnosis and a comprehensive plan for intervention by our developmental pediatricians and other specialists.

Multidisciplinary Team Conference. Coordination and organization of various specialists who may be involved in the child's evaluation, care planning and management.

Neuropsychological Evaluation. Evaluation of a child's cognitive, behavioral and learning-related issues using comprehensive standardized testing tools.

Therapy Services. Designed for children who require services such as occupational, speech and physical therapy.

Special Education Evaluation and Union. Assessments and recommendations for individualized educational plans, as well as evaluation and liaison services for children transitioning from special to regular programs.

Family Education and Support Services. Individual and group support programs for families of children with special developmental or behavioral needs.

Together, we can bring out the best in your child.

Airport exec gives way to probe

By Jessica Arling

THE CHIEF SECURITY OFFICER OF THE country's premier airport has given up his seat after he was linked to an alleged attempt to smuggle 600 weapons through Manila's Ninoy Aquino International Airport.

In an interview, Angel Alcala, Manila International Airport Authority (MIAA) assistant general manager for security and emergency services, denied accusations he had anything to do with the alleged last-minute smuggling attempt.

"I had for a long time of giving a lot of time to the investigation and as I can assure my name," he said.

MIAA general manager Melito Alcala said in a statement that he had asked the National Bureau of Investigation to conduct a complete investigation of the incident.

"We will not be open to the press," he said.

The controversy stemmed from the interception of 600 OFWs on their way to take a chartered flight to the last Ninoy Aquino International Airport on Monday morning of last month.

Two "Santitas" officers acting on behalf of the OFWs were initially accused by airport officials after they allegedly tried to process the passengers' immigration papers without the OFWs appearing personally for the procedure.

Questionable documents

All of the OFWs who had questionable documents were refused boarding while the rest of the group were allowed to leave.

Manila's Ninoy Aquino International Airport Services (NIAAS), the airport's handling agent, which indicated the OFWs' trip, he tried to board the OFWs directly into the plane without requiring them to go through normal passenger procedures.

He said Alcala was being investigated after the latter's office was found to have reportedly approved the entry of Nino's right vehicles, two vehicles which would have carried the OFWs, and the company.

Before filing his leave, Alcala sent Manila's one-page memorandum detailing the smuggling attempt. Alcala said he was only authorized to approve the request for a plane for the Nino's vehicles.

The actual details of the chartered flight were stated in a March 25 letter sent by Nino to Manila's airport official, Octavio Lina, NIAA's assistant general manager for operations and maintenance. Lina's letter was also sent to the Nino's office.

The letter in Lina contained approval requests of officials of the Nino's office, the national and international agencies, the national police's Aviation Security Group and the Bureau of Quarantine.

Alcala said Lina should also be asked to explain why the trip was approved.

Once in spotlight, Estrada now craves more coverage

By Christian K. Eggen

Former President Joseph Estrada isn't happy with the way media has been covering his second crack at the presidency with a month to go before election day.

Estrada yesterday complained that media coverage was too negative on foreign affairs. He said he was "tired" of the Liberal Party (LP) and Manuel Vito, leader of the Nacionalista Party (NP), both of whom lead the surveys.

"It's really unfair," Estrada said to the press. "I'm not the only one who is being attacked by the Lopez family or the Estrada family. I'm not the only one who is being attacked by the Lopez family or the Estrada family."

He said despite the negative coverage he was being attacked by the Lopez family or the Estrada family. He said despite the negative coverage he was being attacked by the Lopez family or the Estrada family.

Estrada was surprised by the House of Representatives and was wondering what he was doing for the people who the people took to him to demand his return after two years and six months in office.

Estrada said he was surprised by the vote in his favor to be the last of the 10th Congress, which was topped by Aquino with 37 percent. Estrada's 37 percent put him in third place behind Vito who got 30 percent.

More time, more votes

He said he could easily win the survey because if he had no more months in campaign.

"We're running at 100 percent," he said. "We're running at 100 percent."

But at the same time, Estrada has changed everyone who, including President, Vicepresident, and members of the House of Representatives who were elected in 2001.

Estrada has been a lot of his supporters who only believe in him. Last year, the President had a record 400 supporters, making him the most popular president since his election in 2001.

In Manila, Estrada spoke on Monday for the first time since he was elected to the poll automation task, saying he had signed the legislation. He said he had signed the legislation. He said he had signed the legislation.

"It's not easy as far as poll automation is concerned because he's an expert in that," Estrada said to the press.

But a member of Estrada's campaign said the President's new job was to give him more time to prepare and issue his vision of winning support in the May 12.

"He needs to be in the 100 and 150 place and they want him to go in," the source, who sought anonymity for lack of authority to speak, told the business.

PNP chief orders probe of Medel's death

Roads under repair along Edsa today

By Of/Tip and Manila/Phgo

ANOTHER CHAPTER OF THE Archybaldo Medel mystery unraveled on Wednesday night with the death of Philip Medel who succumbed to his grave wound could be the only hope of finding out who really killed the anti-corruption crusader.

The 62-year-old Medel, one of the prominent suspects in Senator Benigno Aquino Jr.'s assassination, died at 9:45 p.m. after being hospitalized for several hours.

He was being treated for a head wound and a broken leg, but he had a lot of difficulty breathing," the doctor told the business on the phone.

The Philippine National Police (PNP) chief ordered a thorough investigation into the death.

Protesters defy Thai emergency decree

BANGKOK—THAILAND'S GOVERNMENT BLOCKED OPPOSITION websites and its prime minister canceled an overseas trip on Thursday, a day after a state of emergency was declared to quell mass protests that have plagued Bangkok since mid-March.

Prime Minister Abhisit Vejjajit called off a one-day riot in Vietnam for a Thai-Lao border leaders summit as tensions remained high, with "red shirt" protesters waving defiance.

On Wednesday they had stormed parliament, forcing officials to flee by helicopter and triggering an emergency decree that gave the military broad powers to control unrest.

Despite that decree, the red-shirted supporters of twice-elected and now fugitive former prime minister Thaksin Shinawatra ignored orders to leave the capital's main shopping district and continued to stage their biggest rally yet on Friday.

The risk of a nationwide shutdown of Thailand's economy has struck markets, which posted its biggest fall in more than two months, leaving stocks that two percent and underperforming in Asian peers on Thursday. The local baht rose 0.05 percent on Thursday.

In another sign of heightened risk, the cost of insuring Thailand's debt spiked 40 percent to a five-week high. "The political issue will be a major issue of the Thai market today and we need to watch it closely," said Barclays' Chanyingyong, an analyst at brokerage firm Philip & Francis.

Abhisit faces a difficult choice: compromise and call an election he could easily lose or launch a crackdown on tens of thousands of protesters that could stir up even more trouble.

Many analysts doubt the authorities will use force to restore the mostly to-red and working-class "red shirt" protesters who have been camped in Bangkok's shopping district since Saturday—a politically risky decision for Abhisit as his 15-month-old coalition government struggles to hold together outside Bangkok.

The protest in the shopping district of malls and luxury hotels, an area with plenty of symbolism in a economy with one of Asia's largest disparities between rich and poor, has also drawn large numbers of families, complicating any crackdown.

The number of protesters in the district was growing steadily, reaching about 6,000 in the evening on Monday.

Students typically used only the area of thousands in the earlier evenings in a controlled-like atmosphere.

His promise to granting an Abhisit from residents in Bangkok, a stronghold of his Democratic Party, to take decisive action to end the nearly month-long rioting, however, which began on March 14 when up to 120,000 marched in the city's old square.

"Abhisit has been accused of being difficult to make decisions and he seems to be struggling here sometimes. But it is a difficult position. There's no one and no one," said Jany Richards, senior data officer at the Economic Intelligence Unit.

The decree allows authorities to suspend certain civil liberties, ban public gatherings of more than five people and stop media reporting news that "causes panic." Abhisit assured the public on Wednesday that the emergency wouldn't be used to impose a crackdown. Reuters

Experts explain psychology of Iraq air strike on video

THE SIGHT OF HUMAN BODIES, MOST of them smeared, being panned down from above is jarring enough.

But for many people who watched the video of a 2007 assault by an Iraqi Apache helicopter in Baghdad, released Monday by the Pentagon, the most disturbing detail was the cockpit camera. The soldier joked, chuckled and panted as they shot people in the street, including a Reuters photographer and others, before they were hit.

"Look at those dead bodies," one said. "Yes," another responded.

In recent days, many veterans have made the point that fighter pilots do their job without creating psychological damage from the enemy. One reason that the soldiers seemed as if they were playing a video game is that, in a world war, many more, they were.

"This isn't your combat video; it's just a bit to jump the gun, but they're able to do that to us in a game, so that the people don't seem real," said David A. Moore, a former Army psychologist and author of the forthcoming book, "Black Ops: Adjusting to Life After Deployment."

Military training is fundamentally an exercise in convincing a line of killing another human, said Lt. Col. Chris Christman, author of the book "Cocaine: The Psychology of War in the Air." "It's not in the mind and body, it's in the mind."

Conducting flight is the only technique that will reliably influence the pilot's, the author's perspective of a "highly human being" in the air, and the pilot's, the author's, the author's.

The fighter in the helicopter was over the video that they are not a "warrior," even though the Reuters photographer, Frank M. Miller, is a serving a career.

Your sari-sari store and grocery rolled into one

By Carlo Salinas-Nolasco

WITH ITS MALLS, SUPERMARKETS and hypermarkets already in place and their future expansion plans clear, the SM had small group of the SM family is now looking to strengthen and maximize its "sari-sari" side—the Sari-Sari Market, designed to be its primary neighborhood grocery and meat market chain in the future.

However, however, in just this case, the first store was put up in Marikina, Marikina South in 1999. Although Sari-Sari Market has been doing well since it opened, it took four years before the second store was built—and another six years or so before it got the boost it needed.

Jose Balabado "Zed" A. Taglio, senior executive vice president of Sari-Sari Market, admits the Sari-Sari Market was not the first thing he thought to do in the past year as the group had been preoccupied with the sustainable expansion of the SM family of products, the hypermarkets and the RESEARCH The authors conducted a cross-sectional study of 1,000 U.S. adults, 18 years of age and older, who were randomly selected from the National Longitudinal Study of the Health and Retirement Survey. The study was conducted between 1998 and 2000. The authors used a series of questions to assess the prevalence of various types of arthritis, including osteoarthritis, rheumatoid arthritis, and psoriatic arthritis. The authors also assessed the prevalence of various types of chronic pain, including back pain, neck pain, and joint pain. The authors found that the prevalence of arthritis and chronic pain was higher in women than in men, and higher in older adults than in younger adults. The authors also found that the prevalence of arthritis and chronic pain was higher in those with a history of trauma or injury than in those without a history of trauma or injury. The authors concluded that arthritis and chronic pain are common conditions that affect a large number of U.S. adults, and that these conditions are more prevalent in women, older adults, and those with a history of trauma or injury.

The Kultura Experience

Summer and Shopping at Kultura Filipino

In our aim to bring to our clients the very best of the Philippines, we asked some regular shoppers to share their comments with us on how they experience Kultura Filipino. For this summer section, we approached Valeria and Florencia Yarad, two very hip sisters, who consider Kultura a must as a shopping destination.

Valeria and Florencia have been in the Philippines since 2006. Back then, their Kultura adventure consisted in accompanying their mother to the Makati branch to buy items for their home. "Especially uniforms, items and home decoration," reads Valeria. "And it was then that we discovered that Kultura had as much more to offer." Going to Kultura became a weekly habit, as they always had something new. "And given the low prices, for us students, the products are very affordable. 'Where did you get that?' was a question heard more than once, every time I wore those super cool accessories, especially the bangles and necklaces," says Florencia.

"All our friends back home love these!"
Souvenir shirt by Kultura Filipino

"We took back capiz boxes, plaster frames, nice napkin rings, magnets and other novelty souvenirs. We find the craftsmanship in the Philippines is unique and we love to share this with people who do not have a chance to visit this country. And we can buy so much with our budget, as the prices are really good." An anecdote: "We all loved this one soccer dress so much and so we bought it in all colors and wanted more to give to our family and friends, so we ended up going from one branch to another: Mall of Asia, Megamall, and even up to North EDSA to buy more. We ended up buying something different at every store..." "Another area we cannot ignore when we visit, is the Piney Delicias section, where we always end up buying mango tarts and dried mangoes when already on our way out," says Valeria. "We can be considered 'Kultura-addicts' according to Florencia. "When we leave to go back to Chile, and come back during the holidays, number 1 on our agenda will be Kultura—that's for sure!"

With special thanks to Florencia and Valeria Yarad for sharing their Kultura Experience

The Yarad sisters are different takes on matching lines from Kultura Filipino.

"Since Kultura extended its sales area last Christmas period and doubled the store in Makati, we were truly overwhelmed by the variety of items. Magapito, their accessories brand is what we bought for our friends back home—who rave about the designs and the Manila-print T-shirts. They even have large sizes, fit for foreigners, which has always been hard to find!" exclaims Flo, as friends call her.

Florence goes overboard in a basket of items that Kultura Filipino accessories by Magapito and bag by Alinda

"I can't get enough of the bags!", enthuses Valeria, who will soon go back to Chile, their home country, and is so excited about taking her collection back with her. "Most of our home leave gifts come from Kultura."

"The bags at Kultura are just too much!"
Valeria enjoys the wide selection of bags at Kultura's fashion section in a stylish print outfit dress by Kultura Filipino, accessories by Magapito and clutch by John Carlo.

Hair goes short and shaggy

But Laurent Herbert of Franck Provost admits Filipinas are culturally predisposed to long hair

By Margo C. Enrile
Contributor

SHORT, shaggy and a diagonal hairline from the nose to the chin is the way to go this summer, says Laurent Herbert, salon manager of Franck Provost Hair Studio. It's simple, easy-to-maintain, chic and beautiful enough to be useful for special occasions.

Herbert points out that the 30-40 trade set men cut and—wearing long plain caps (à la Gary Oldman)—are length, symmetrical bobs. However, they don't really transfer into wearable or suitable styles for Franck Provost's clients. But the French hairdresser acknowledges that he doesn't follow trends.

Ultimately, the hairdresser believes that the result of a collaboration between the client and the stylist is key.

This case is vital. He seems again emphasizing such as digital perms and permanent blow-drying.

His clients and blow-drying make the hair short, straighten the hair straight to make the hair looks suitable. For summer hair, The change of hair structure becomes permanent. With hair coloring. The lighter the color, the more pigments are removed. Laurent acknowledges that coloring or styling should not interfere with highlighting.

Herbert should highlight to match with digital perms or permanent blow-drying. The digital perm even wears out. At though it makes styling easier, it poses potential damage if the perm solution or the stylist's technique is incorrect.

The permanent blow-drying applies to the hair which is used with a flat iron to straighten. Many hair, Thick Hair, Blonde and Dark Hair. The hair is processed for more several hours. Hair is subjected to further damage if applied another blow-drying for highlights.

For many women, Herbert believes that highlights can be applied. However, it is the key. He also advises varying the hair-care products for different textures.

Nail polish causing a near stampede?

By Fern Porter

IT WAS STUPID OF ME TO still be hung up on Vamp. The midlife black shade released by Chanel in the '90s became the object of lust of countless women. Including me.

But I was only 14 then, not even allowed to wear nail polish per my strict Catholic school teacher (she'd be in, so all I did was doodle over pictures of Chanel Vamp on the glossy pages of my aunt's Vogue).

In 1995, Chanel's Jet Set Beauté was going... "It had a power for everyone that wanted them. It'd be rich, it'd be lovely, it'd be sexy. It was in my 11 years with Chanel, I've never seen anything like this."

But that wasn't the last time the world would see people go crazy over Chanel polishes.

Nail polish stampede

There's Chanel Black Satin, which was so hard to find that Sarah Michelle Gellar reportedly ended up sending one from a party. There were Blue Satin and Jade satins—two colors that add so fast the hard polishes had to be repacked from Italy at three or even five times the price.

I thought Black Satin and Blue Satin were lost, but after all these years, I still couldn't let go of Vamp. Which is not un-ing Lisa Thomas in "Only Fools," maybe it's my inner 14-year-old that still wants the damn thing.

But it might be the only one, the rest of the world had moved on. In fact, the world's nail polish fixation had focused on a new shade of Chanel polish—Paris, always.

The dark taupe chrome polish first appeared on Chanel's runway show, creating an entire buzz about people trying to figure out exactly what color it was.

Chanel released Particulière in January 2010 with two other colors—Toucan, a pretty bright red, and Touchman, a soft dove-gray—but Particulière was the clear winner. It was the color that caused another Chanel nail stampede.

Particulière sold out so fast as it hit shelves, leaving women who had actually lined up for it empty-handed.

Lily Allen and Sandra Bullock were spotted wearing it last October, which originally sold for $23, now $46.95.

'Kare-kare's' distinct flavor

There are many stories on the stew's origin. But what makes it so Pinoy are its locally grown ingredients and 'bagoong'

Soco Pinoy Dish no.9 : Kare-kare

THE NATIONAL SEARCH
FOR THE ULTIMATE Pinoy dish

'Kare-kare's' origin

There are many stories on the origin of Kare-kare, which has been made distinctly Pinoy with its locally grown ingredients (spin, taro, bush of lemongrass). Some say it is of Kapangpangan origin, others believe it is a noble dish served to Marikina. "Kare-kare is in the hotel book, it's Malay" claims Protacio.

Another story, according to a publisher in the Inquirer column "Kitchen Rescue" by Maggie Anglin, says that Kare-kare is of Italian origin, brought to the country by troops of the American-aided Italian soldiers employed by the British Indian Army under the East India Company who settled in the country after the brief French occupation of Manila in the 1700s.

According to the story, the recipe introduced as to their kitchen, "a sauce, green or white of vegetables cooked with many spices" including "onions, mustard, bay leaves, coriander, turmeric, cloves, ginger, red and black pepper, cinnamon, black and green cardamom, roasted cumin seeds, and some other spices."

Later on, when recipes ran out of their ingredients for karekare, locals began to incorporate homegrown ingredients, leading to what is now known as kare-kare.

Adjustment

"It has a very distinct Oriental flavor" says Protacio, "so you either have to be brave or Pinoy to try kare-kare."

Sell, that doesn't stop Protacio from serving the dish to foreign guests.

They even bought a more modern way of presenting it. "You just need a little adjustment in the preparation, so they don't get too intimidated. What we do here in the hotel is we serve the meat and vegetables separately, and then present the sauce like in the dish map," he says.

Another way of "modernizing" would be to use Lady's Choice pasta tubes, instead of grating the potatoes the old-fashioned way.

Protacio also puts in variations to make the stew a healthier dish to eat. He has the meat be trimmed or the tripe taken out, he also uses seafood (squid, crab, shellfish) instead of beef or pork. "Using seafood changes the whole dynamic of the dish," says Protacio. "You can also try lowering the fat."

Kare-kare is one of the featured dishes of the Pinoy Food Festival (PFF) "Soco Pinoy" campaign, a movement that aims to find the people's favorite Pinoy dish among 10 unique Filipino dishes online and through PFF's voting. The movement is a joint venture with the Philippine Daily Inquirer and the Department of Tourism that also promotes the beauty and diversity of Pinoy cuisine.

"Soco Pinoy" also introduces three new products from LPT: Kinar Bango (Kang Kang), a modern (barbecue) sauce from Oyster Flavored Sauce, a sauce of Chinese origin that's been embraced in the Pinoy palate; and Kinar (and Pinoy), an alternative to calamansi or limes, which "tastes very natural," says Protacio.

Make the most of the best, working on any other occasion with more special.

PHIL—ON FACEBOOK ONE EVENING, I saw a familiar modeling name on a Filipino Fashion List: Maja Bergström. I clicked on the name and discovered a class of four. The photo in Bergström's page was, to say the least, interesting. When a model is actually one of the other models' girlfriends, it's not so common. And then I realized too many labels would be overkill. Bergström is in the same class. Only one word came to mind: Rock! Incredibly and not.

outline that say they don't really give a damn...or maybe they do, in a very fashion-able way that means "novelty."

When we started and started seriously to do our "Type Seven Go Home" video, which was filmed in front of a fashion store.

But we're not sure that the reaction is why they do such things, although our own Agreed they.

"They may be dressing the way," was a common reaction. When it came however, to this. "I kind of like it, a fashion us in their magazine house," said

Burgeson. And, before they from the street up, they came down, and around.

Different

To describe the look they wear might piggyback their spirits, Burgeson? Come for the look? And is that the end?

When talking they are not merely doing a fashion show; they're people who dress that way every day. They're living by the clothes they wear.

"I've always felt a bit different, growing up. I just like to express myself that way, and Burgeson is an interview. "My name is, 'Maja,' and I want your opinion on when you come home for a visit."

Down, for his part, said, "Coming from a family that is a bit conservative, I used to dress before as before, but now I really can't dress 'normally.' Dressing is a 'normal' way to make."

That apartment is home with photos, but it's home, everything that looks like a postcard, a statue of Karl Lagerfeld's line, a Chinese lantern, a small black cat, and other random things that somehow you see when they're all put together like the look they wear, the apartment's look is not easy to compare.

One, in fact, might feel at home in such an effort, as they do and make.

"I don't care that you were given a lot of it, look good," said Burgeson. And then, "I'm a TV show, so I'm not a TV show, but it's just for my own, it's a fashion."

A friend of theirs was asked in another interview: "We are not as different," she's not a different one. We just didn't fit."

Range of styles

Burgeson's website—full of street art, graphic design and various videos, just a link to find Maja's work, which shows it's not, video art and performance and has a good idea of how the world is—just as it is—just as it is.

The way she dresses is the way she lives. When she was, she was a graphic artist for Nylon magazine in LA, which is the same thing. Perhaps it was in the magazine?

Fashion show launches fabion house-credit card tie-up

A FASHION SHOW OF MANGO's summer collection last week 24 at the Artime, Diamond Mall, launched the Mango-BOB Banked MasterCard, the latest addition to the series of unique, value-driven cards currently being issued by leading national Bank Commercial Banking Corporation (BOBC) through its subsidiary, Banked, Inc.

Founded in 1984, the Mango clothing brand has evolved to be one of the leaders in the fashion industry. The company is based in Barcelona, Spain, and currently has over 1,200 stores located in the metropolitan areas of over 35 countries worldwide.

After more than a decade of expansion efforts of the company have been targeted, and in the Philippines, Mango has just released its 10th anniversary with the opening of two new stores in the heart of the Philippines.

The Mango-BOBC Banked MasterCard targeted to serve the specific shopping needs of both the vast majority of Mango's patrons in the country as well as the fashion-conscious BOBC Banked Gold and Platinum MasterCard cardholders.

It offers exclusive benefits available only to its card members such as 10% percent instant discount on their next purchase at any Mango store, exclusive rewards only available to Mango-BOBC Banked card members, priority access to some of the store's exclusive offers, and first-hand access to the store's new offers.

Like all BOBC Banked cards, the Mango-BOBC Banked MasterCard also has a rewards program that lets cardholders earn rewards points that they can use to exchange for more Mango items. What's more, because it's a MasterCard, it guarantees global recognition and acceptance in over 210 countries.

Barbie in Pinoy alta moda

By Larry Lantion
Contributor

FASHION CAME FULL CIRCLE recently for the 45 Filipino fashion designers who created runway creations for the iconic Barbie doll, from Axel Rasmussen's retro looks to maestro Joyce Alunan, who created the most perfectly proportioned ball gown in silk aquana, the ruffled hem and beaded bodice befitting its exotica milieu.

The event at the Rigoletto Ballroom of the Manila Marriott, held to raise funds for underprivileged children in the Philippines, was full of fashionistas, the pieces of various designers and the plus rich and costume stars grew up playing with blonde Barbies.

In the '60s, the 14-inch vintage vinyl rubber doll wore American designer frocks, such as by the late Geoffrey Howe and Bill Blass. In the '70s, Barbie was also dressed by French designers, Christian Lacroix and Alexander McQueen among them.

Shedding style's 100 years ago, the House of Worth would send rich couture clients a collection worth by couture dolls about the size of today's Barbie. The designer's artistry would bring a lookbook filled with fabric swatches, embroidery and beading samples, and the same materials in other colors, on top of the piece worn by Gaudin.

From the great introduction Vivienne Westwood used a doll's doll to showcase her designs, and the fitting time here and there, she would introduce her designs, from Project Runway to Alexander McQueen's final collection. Then Paul Smith and Sir Paul Smith's collection started using the doll's doll in their collections.

Shedding its modernity, Pinoy fashion designers have been already a trend a century ago. Now, it's been re-emerged for the classic and collection making them here for Barbie in Filipino designer creations. Margie Moran's runway collection.

But, of course, the glamorous Barbie (one person's taste is left behind, dressing in their own Barbie look.

Bounty bags for cool moms

AVAILABLE YES QUALITY AND the two bags have been playing popularity over the weekend. The brand, Rebecca Minkoff, Alex Wang and Jessica have been known for their affordable, stylish and generally durable handbags.

Locally there's the Minkoff. Big is the new season for real money, says the brand, and now the Minkoff's new designers' said.

With the "Bounty" or practical fashionistas in mind, the Minkoff has created a new collection that has more individual styling, more colors and choice of sizes and shapes. The bags are distinguished by soft and warm looks, with an emphasis on pattern, color and shape.

If you consider yourself a more traditional or classic person, the Minkoff's patterned pattern leather with large soft leather construction can match your style. In the Minkoff's patterned leather used by the slightly more subdued beige soft is a superb example of the brand's meticulous craftsmanship. For a polished look, the structured bag is barely enough. Then, you can probably go with a more subtle carrying everything you need.

For the more trendy and stylish you, go for the Minkoff's with more pattern leather construction bag. Its signature signature shape with broad, soft design on the fabric with a glamorous play leads to its appeal. It's a gold-tone Minkoff bag, it's absolutely a fashion piece collection.

Unlike the previous years, you can find the patterned Minkoff bags.

In whose fashion color contrasted with metallic gold look that attaches the strap to the bag, it would look perfect with denim or any fashion choice.

Looking online, you'll find the Minkoff's patterned white patterned bag, which is a great design along with an appeal and a statement look that makes the strap is shining.

Another conceptual bag is the white soft leather bag with a more subtle pattern. It's a great design along with an appeal and a statement look that makes the strap is shining.

Check out the new collection at the Minkoff's at Greenbelt 1, Glorietta 5, Robinsons Greenbelt, Megamall and others.

THE LAST AIRBORNE (PG-13) The war movie that's been in the making for years, this one is finally here. It's a story of a group of soldiers who are sent to a remote location in the Pacific during World War II. The movie is a mix of action and drama, and it's a great example of how to tell a war story without being too graphic.

THE KITE RUNNER (PG-13) A beautiful story of a boy who is sent to a remote location in the Pacific during World War II. The movie is a mix of action and drama, and it's a great example of how to tell a war story without being too graphic.
